Rising awareness in the community for good indoor air quality

The Environmental Protection Department presented awards to building/premises owners and management companies who had obtained Excellent Class or Good Class certificates for their premises in 2013 under the Indoor Air Quality (IAQ) Certification Scheme for Offices and Public Places.

The Permanent Secretary for the Environment/Director of Environmental Protection, Ms Anissa Wong, commended premises owners and property management companies for achieving good indoor air quality

Every day, we spend more than 70 per cent of our time at home, in offices and various indoor environments. Nevertheless, indoor air quality is often compromised or even neglected. Poor indoor air quality causes discomfort for occupants, and leads to ill health in the long term, and in the workplace, it often results in increased absenteeism and lower productivity.

To improve IAQ and promote public awareness of its importance, the Environmental Protection Department has implemented a voluntary IAQ Management Program for offices and public places since September 2003. A two level IAQ Objectives (Excellent Class and Good Class) is used as the benchmark to assess the IAQ of the buildings/premises. Building/premises owners and management companies can hire an accredited examiner to assess the IAQ of their premises. An IAQ certificate will be issued if the assessment result complies with the IAQ Objectives.

In the annual IAQ Certificate Award Ceremony cum Technical Seminar organized by the Environmental Protection Department on 25th February 2014, Ms. Anissa Wong, the Permanent Secretary for the Environment/Director of Environmental Protection, praised the commitment of the premises owners and property management companies participating in the IAQ Certification Scheme – the first-of-its-kind in East Asia.

Their efforts provided a pleasant indoor air environment for users of their offices and public premises, thereby protecting public health and setting good examples for others to follow.

During the ceremony, Ms. Wong presented awards to representatives from 126 organizations who had obtained Excellent Class or Whole-building Good Class certificates for their premises. Ms. Wong also thanked MTR Corporation Limited, Citybus Limited, New World First Bus Services Limited, Kowloon Motor Bus Co. Ltd. and Long Win Bus Company Limited for their supports over the years to progressively implement the practices given in the two Practice Notes for Managing Air Quality in air-conditioned Public Transport Facilities – Railways and Buses.

Since the launch of the IAQ Certification Scheme in 2003 to promote and commend good IAQ management practices, the number of premises participating in the Certification Scheme has continually increased. By end of 2013, more than 900 certificates have been registered, representing an increase of 17 per cent compared with the previous year. Among those certificates, 192 are “Excellent Class” and 784 are “Good Class”. For those certified premises, 244 are owned by the Government and 732 are owned by private organizations.

In the technical seminar following the ceremony, professionals and premises managers shared their expertise and experience for achieving good IAQ with the attendees.

More information about IAQ and its certification scheme can be found at the IAQ Information Centre at 1/F, HKPC Building, 78 Tat Chee Avenue, Kowloon Tong, HK or its dedicated website at www.iaq.gov.hk.
